Life Skills for Our Home

Long term care facilities are encountering increasing challenges with the changing workforce. Managers within each department are indicating that the people who are applying for positions, in many instances, lack knowledge about basic life skills and basic job skills. For the most part, long term care professionals believe these people could be good employees if we had an effective means of teaching them these basic skills. As such, WAHSA introduces a new program now available to long term care professionals --

Simple Savvy®: Life Skills For Our Home.

Simple Savvy® includes five components:

1. A videotape (appx. 10 minutes) which talks about life skills and job skills in very general terms – in essence, an introduction to life skills. This animated video takes a “tongue-in-cheek” approach to many sensitive topics including appropriate dress, body piercing, attitudes, communication, teamwork, staying healthy, slang, and many other issues.
2. A booklet that goes into more detail about basic life skills – This booklet includes checklists for the reader to complete. In essence, through this self-evaluation, the reader will be able to determine their life skills areas of strength and those in which they could improve.
3. A “take-it-with you” card listing the 20 skills of savvy employees (folds to business-card size).
4. A 16x20 poster listing the 20 skills of savvy employees.
5. Simple Savvy®: The Game — An inservice tool that will teach your employees the proper way of providing quality care, practicing teamwork, and improving communication skills — all while having fun.

These five components of Simple Savvy focus on at many areas of life skills including work ethic, teamwork, employee mental and physical health, communication and appearance. These products now are available to all long term care professionals.
